

13th & 15th
W 20th St.

New York June 15th/91.

Col W^m P. Johnston

Dear Col'

On April 15th I wrote Mrs J. & on the 20th I wrote [^]you & if you both have written, I have heard nothing from either of you. I have lost several letters since my removal, & perhaps Mrs J's & yours may have been among the number, I do hope not, but you can tell, by reference to your dates. Mr B. C. W. was to see me a few eve'^{gs} since, bringing your last letter to him, to read to me, & said he would write you. I inclose you an account, or rather the history of Wellesly College. There is a very superior young lady there the latin Teacher, Miss C. E Cook, the french Teacher at H.S.N.M. College knows her. I think she would like to go to the South. Our weather is very warm. I have been under the D^{rs} care for nervous debility, since May[^]29th & suffer very much, but it is His Will, & as long as He does not make me helpless, I will never murmur. This is a delightful house Col, if you have any friends who wish to be private, you can give my name, the location, & surroundings— most diserable, the table excellent, & good servants all colored. You can take rooms without meals. I inclose you two of Mrs S. cards. Hoping you are all well with love to Mrs J. very truly yours

Jo. L Newcomb.